On June 1, 2021, the Technical Working Group of the Member Countries of the Amazon Cooperation Treaty Organization - ACTO: Bolivia, Brazil, Colombia, Ecuador, Guyana, Peru, Suriname, and Venezuela, approved within the framework of the competencies and mandates of the PS/ACTO, the Memorandum of Understanding of Cooperation and Mutual Assistance for the Integral Management of Fire among the Member Countries of the ACTO (MOU MIF).

The latter is to deal with the ecological, social, environmental, and technical aspects of fire in an integral manner, which includes risk management and the fight against forest fires in the Amazon countries and in particular in the Amazon territories.

I. CONTEXT

Forest fires in the Amazon represent an invaluable loss of natural, social, and economic resources; as well as biodiversity, which contributes to the worsening of climate change due to the high levels of carbon dioxide emissions resulting from the burning of organic matter. They also affect health; and they cause material damage to local populations, in addition to impacting other regions of South America.

The implementation of integral fire management is a permanent task and, in some cases, to be effective it requires an articulation between more than one country, while fires do not recognize geopolitical borders and can affect more than one country in the same event. The increasing impacts that fire in the Amazon have been causing over the last decades are the reason for the attention of different initiatives and specialist organizations in the matter.

Notwithstanding the foregoing, and even though in some cases they are individual beneficiaries, ACTO Member Countries have requested in the different instances of the Organization that the PS/ACTO provide a regional approach that encompasses the eight countries beyond individual cooperation existing with the sole recommendation that ongoing regional efforts not be duplicated and rather that they be articulated with existing initiatives.
